IRAN

Iran is a vast country in the southwest Asia and Middle East. Tehran is known as the capital and largest city, and the economic, political and administrative centre of Iran.

Iran borders the Republic of Azerbaijan, Armenia and Turkmenistan from North, Afghanistan and Pakistan from East, and Turkey and Iraq from West. Iran also shares its northern border with Caspian Sea and its southern border with Persian Gulf and Oman Sea.

Iran owns the largest gas fields, the fourth largest oil reserves, and the largest zinc mines worldwide. Iran is among the best countries in the world in the production of pistachio, saffron, caviar, barberry, turquoise, various fresh and dried fruits, handmade carpet, and date palm.

Iran's population is more than 80 million consisting of different ethnic and linguistic groups. The official language of the majority of people is Persian. However, other languages such as Azari, Kurdish, Gilaki, Taleshi, and Arabic as well as few other common languages among ethnicities are so widespread.

Iran is the birthplace of diverse culture. The majority religion in Iran is Shia Islam, but even so, Sunni Muslims, Christians, Jews, Zoroastrians, and Mandaeans (followers of John) likewise live in Iran.

Iran possesses a rich cultural heritage alongside a valuable architecture. According to the United Nation World Tourism Organization (UNWTO), Iran ranks respectively tenth in historical and fifth in natural attractions in the world. So far, twenty of cultural heritages and one natural heritage of Iran have been registered in UNESCO as a world Heritage.

Iran is a four-season country with many natural attractions, which attracts many tourists every year. The weather in northern coasts of Iran is hot and humid in the summer but mild in the winter. Northwestern and western regions have mild summers and cold winters. Southern regions conversely have extremely hot summers and winters. According to investigations by the NASA, the hottest spot on Earth between 2004 and 2009 had been the Loot Desert in Iran (Kerman Province) with the maximum temperature of 70.7 ° C.

The snow covered heights of the Alborz and Zagros mountain ranges are suitable for winter sports and their slopes for recreation and ecotourism in summer.

Traditional art and handicraft of different regions of Iran represent the art appreciation and poetic spirit of Iranians. Some of the most important handicrafts in Iran are as follows: carpet and rug weaving, pottery, miniature, woodcarving, inlaid work, Etching, Enamels, Tiling and Calligraphy.
