Musandam Peninsula

Musandam Peninsula is the smallest and Northern region of Oman, covering an area of approximately 3,000 square kilometers. Separated from the rest of Oman by the east coast of the UAE, and guarding the southern side of the strategically important Strait of Hormuz, the Musandam Peninsula is dubbed the 'Norway of Arabia' for its beautiful khors (rocky inlets), small villages and dramatic, mountain-hugging roads. Accessible but still isolated in character, this beautiful peninsula with its cultural eccentricities is well worth a visit if you're on an extended tour of Oman, or if you're after a taste of wilderness from Dubai.

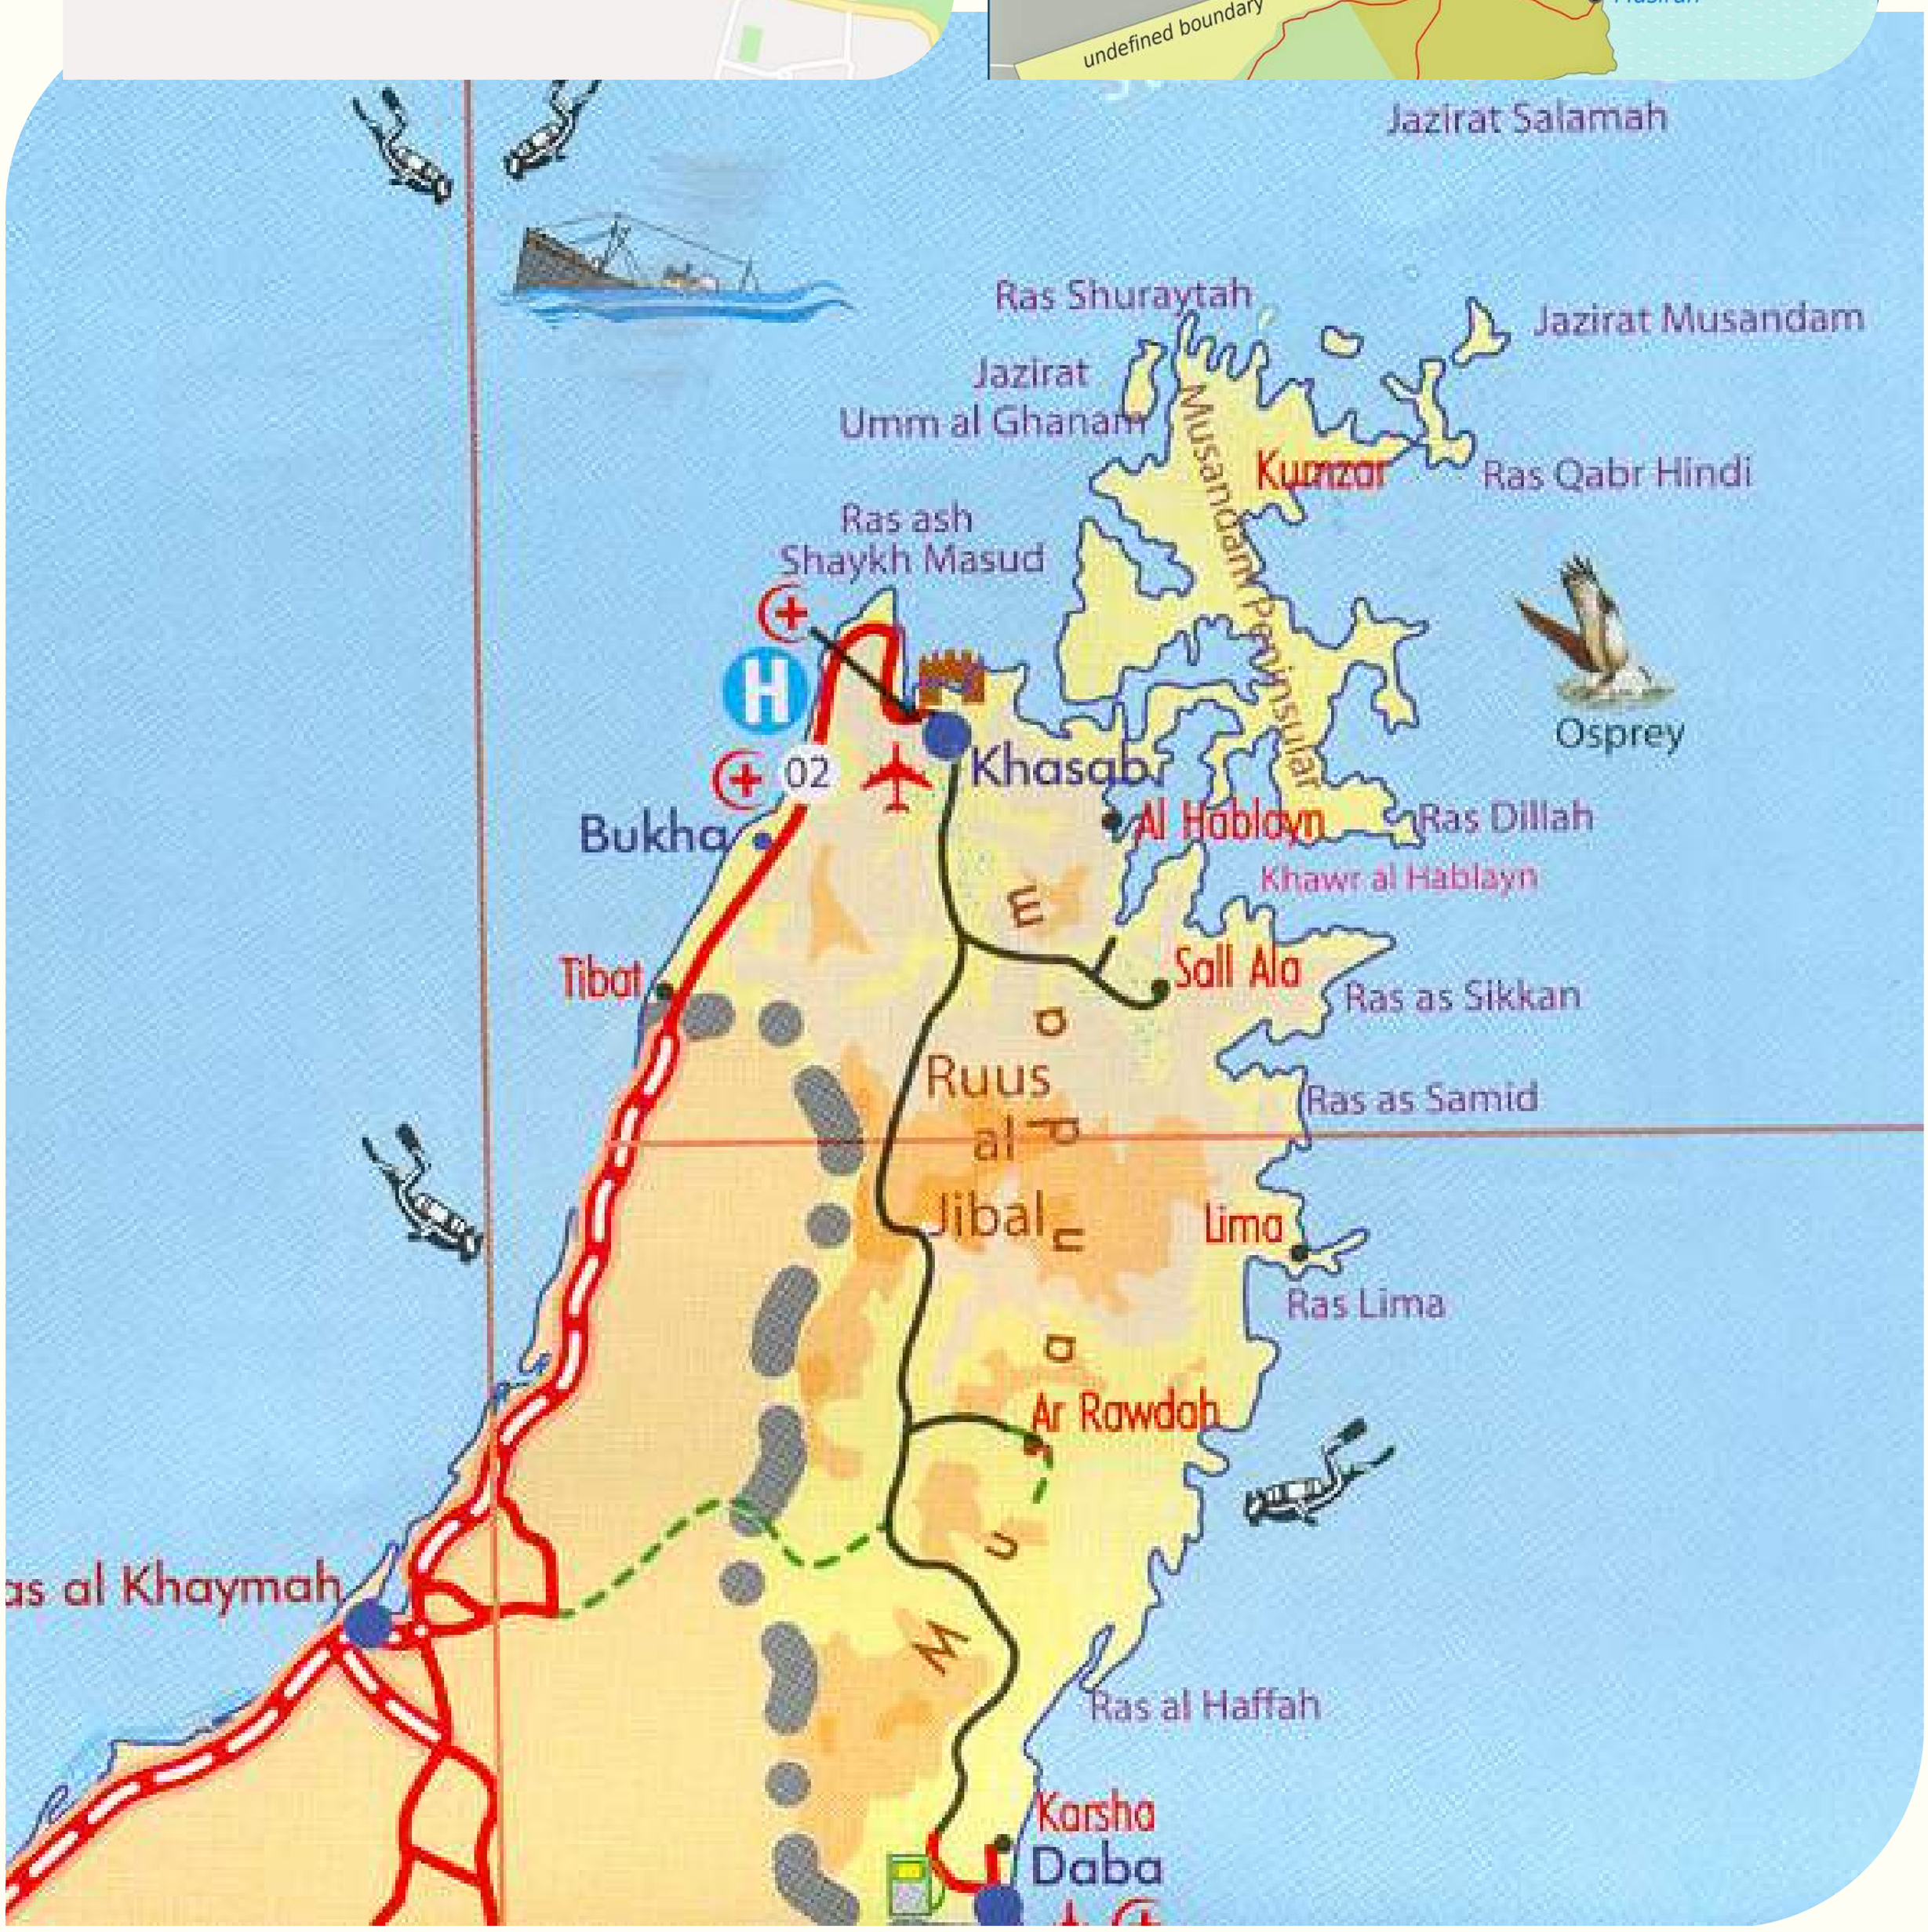

Population of Musandam Peninsula is approximately 33000 inhabitants with the greatest concentration of 20,000 in Khasab, the capital Khasab.

The magnificent Hajar mountain range dominates the Musandam landscape, extending about 640 kilometers from Ras al Hadd in the south to Khasab, ending with the Ru'us al Jabal ('Heads of the Mountains') plunging dramatically and dizzily into the sea. Musandam's highest mountain is Jabal Harim, at 2087 meters.
