COLOMBIA REGIONS

AMAZON REGION

The Colombian Amazon holds great treasures. The region has an impressive biodiversity with its fauna and flora. It is also land of indigenous communities that protect their heritage, culture and home land with the huge forests, that, are a giant carbon dioxide storage and oxygen producer.

The Amazon River connects three countries, many communities, natural reserves, towns and a magical landscape with pink dolphins swimming around the boats. For the connection with nature and another cultures, this is a place that is worth visiting.

CARIBBEAN REGION

Being one of the first regions in developing tourism in the country, the Caribbean has beautiful and touristic cities like Cartagena. But the touristic offer nowadays is huge. You will find the amazing and clean beaches in Tayrona Park along with history and culture of our ancestors. You will also find adventures like the trek to the lost city, arriving to ancient ruins. Or the Guajira, a desertic landscape that offers contact with indigenous communities, flora and fauna and more beautiful beaches in the northernmost point of south America.

You will find perfect places to enjoy sun and beach but also many more activities for you to discover.

ORINOCO

The Llanos is a region with a great biodiversity. This region is a vast tropical plain covered by grassland situated in Colombian and Venezuelan territory.

Most of the Llanos is a treeless savanna filled with swamp grasses and sedges in the low-lying area and with long-stemmed and carpet grasses in the dry area.

This region occupies over ¼ of Colombia's territory, but has a small population. Most of the Llaneros, also known as Colombian cowboys, live on huge fincas with intensive livestock production – coexisting with an amazing variety of undisturbed wildlife.

The Llanos is still undiscovered by mainstream tourism and remains as a true off-beat destination.

PACIFIC REGION

One of the rainiest forests in the world is located here. This wet environment allows this region to be one of the most biodiverse environments in the world. In here you can not just enjoy the rich forests filled with hundreds of species of animals and plants, but also enjoy beautiful beaches and sail in search of whales. You can watch these majestic animals in their natural environment, sometimes with their calves, and hear the whale's songs live.

You can enjoy the outstanding gastronomy this region has, and the happiness of the people that receive the visitors with open arms.

ANDEAN REGION

The Andes travels all south America from south to north. When it arrives to Colombia it splits in three chain of mountains offering a wide variety of climates and sceneries. Some of the main cities in Colombia are located within this mountains like Bogotá, the capital city, and Medellín. But it also has the famous Coffee Region and the important “Páramos” where most of the water in the country is born. A lot of history from the Spanish colony is kept in beautiful small towns of the region, that also have a lot of culture to be discovered.

INSULAR REGION

In Colombia we have access to the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. In both we have islands that offer to the tourist a different experience. In the Caribbean there is Providencia, an isolated island ideal to relax and explore the beauty of the Caribbean. Lonely beautiful beaches allow the visitor to horse ride or take a sun bath, the mountain in the island allows to trek and explore the nature and the pristine waters are the perfect place to explore the underwater with its rich flora and fauna with some diving or snorkelling. Providencia is a paradise like experience to enjoy in Colombia.

INTRODUCTION

Dear Colleagues

Pelecanus SAS was founded in 2016 and is operational since November 2017. You might find out that we do things a bit differently. Clients are our focus and we always do our best to respond quickly and accurately to all enquiries we receive. Our goal is to provide unique and unforgettable experiences to our guests.

Our staff is smart and highly committed to providing the highest service level and quality. We nurture a culture of direct feedback and continuous learning. We believe in sustainable development of our people and personally train our staff, providers and future business partners to deliver a personalized service to each of our guests. We are hands on and are passionate about fulfilling our clients' every wish.

Colombia is a very young country and has been developing its international tourism for a short period of time. The standards clients will encounter in the country may not always be top tier yet, the services and infrastructure might be lacking in certain respects or in some cases not existing. Nevertheless, Colombia offers a wide variety of experiences. With its 2 coasts, the 3 Andean mountain chains, rain forests and many more natural phenomena, Colombia is the second most bio diverse country in the world. The landscapes, animals and plants Colombia boasts are simply breathtaking in their number, size, diversity and beauty.

Colombians are the most welcoming people in the world and visitors are received with unique warmth and hospitality. The variety of cultures within the country is immense and foreigners who will visit Colombia will undoubtedly fall in love with the country, its people or both!

We invite you to learn more about Colombia and experience this great country first hand. Feel free to contact us and we will be pleased to assist with your enquiry and put an unforgettable holiday in place for you.

Sincerely

Frank Spitzer

Founder and manager

TEAM

Frank Spitzer

Born in Zürich, Switzerland, I worked in the financial industry for 20 years, until I decided to leave my country and start my own business. To learn a language, culture and build a network, I did an MBA at the Universidad de los Andes in Bogotá. After traveling around Colombia after my first semester, it became very clear very fast that I would start a business related to tourism, where I could combine my passion with my work. My goal is to create a sustainable business in the Colombian context.

Sebastián Castro

I am a native from Bogota, born, raised and educated in this immense city. Being a historian by profession and an enthusiastic traveler, I have combined my passions and started to work in the travel industry. I am interested in understanding Colombia and my aim is to rediscover the streets, cities, towns and fields, to share the beauty and complexity of my territory with those who visit us.

After my experience in the tourism sector in Colombia, I learned that each trip and tour is completely different, even if they go to the same destination. The variables are endless and the Colombian culture just makes it more interesting and fun.

TEAM

Sara Colmenares

I was born in Bogotá D.C., but I spent a lot of my youth in constant contact with nature and travelled mainly in the central andean region of Colombia, where my family comes from. I enrolled in a professional career in Biology before I obtained my master's degree and PhD in Biological Sciences, with major in Ecology.

My main interest has been to study the relationship between plants and environment and how they respond to the world that surround them. I am also interested in biogeography, conservation, sustainable development and ecosystem services in any habitat, ecosystems and biological organism.

Aura Núñez

I was born on a small farm in Tolima, close to the banks of the Magdalena River. I learned to marvel the majestic Colombian geography, a reason that led me to leave the village and come to the great city. Driven by the passion of the adventure, I chose studies that allowed me to have contact with new cultures, people and places and gave me the tools to translate these realities through the written text. Therefore, I am currently finishing my undergraduate German Philology studies at the National University of Colombia.

My work experience in the administrative field allowed me to be part of the Pelecanus team. Working in a company that shares my fascination with Colombia and my thirst for adventure has been a gratifying and enriching experience. Here it is impossible not to feel that the real adventure begins every day.

SUSTAINABILITY

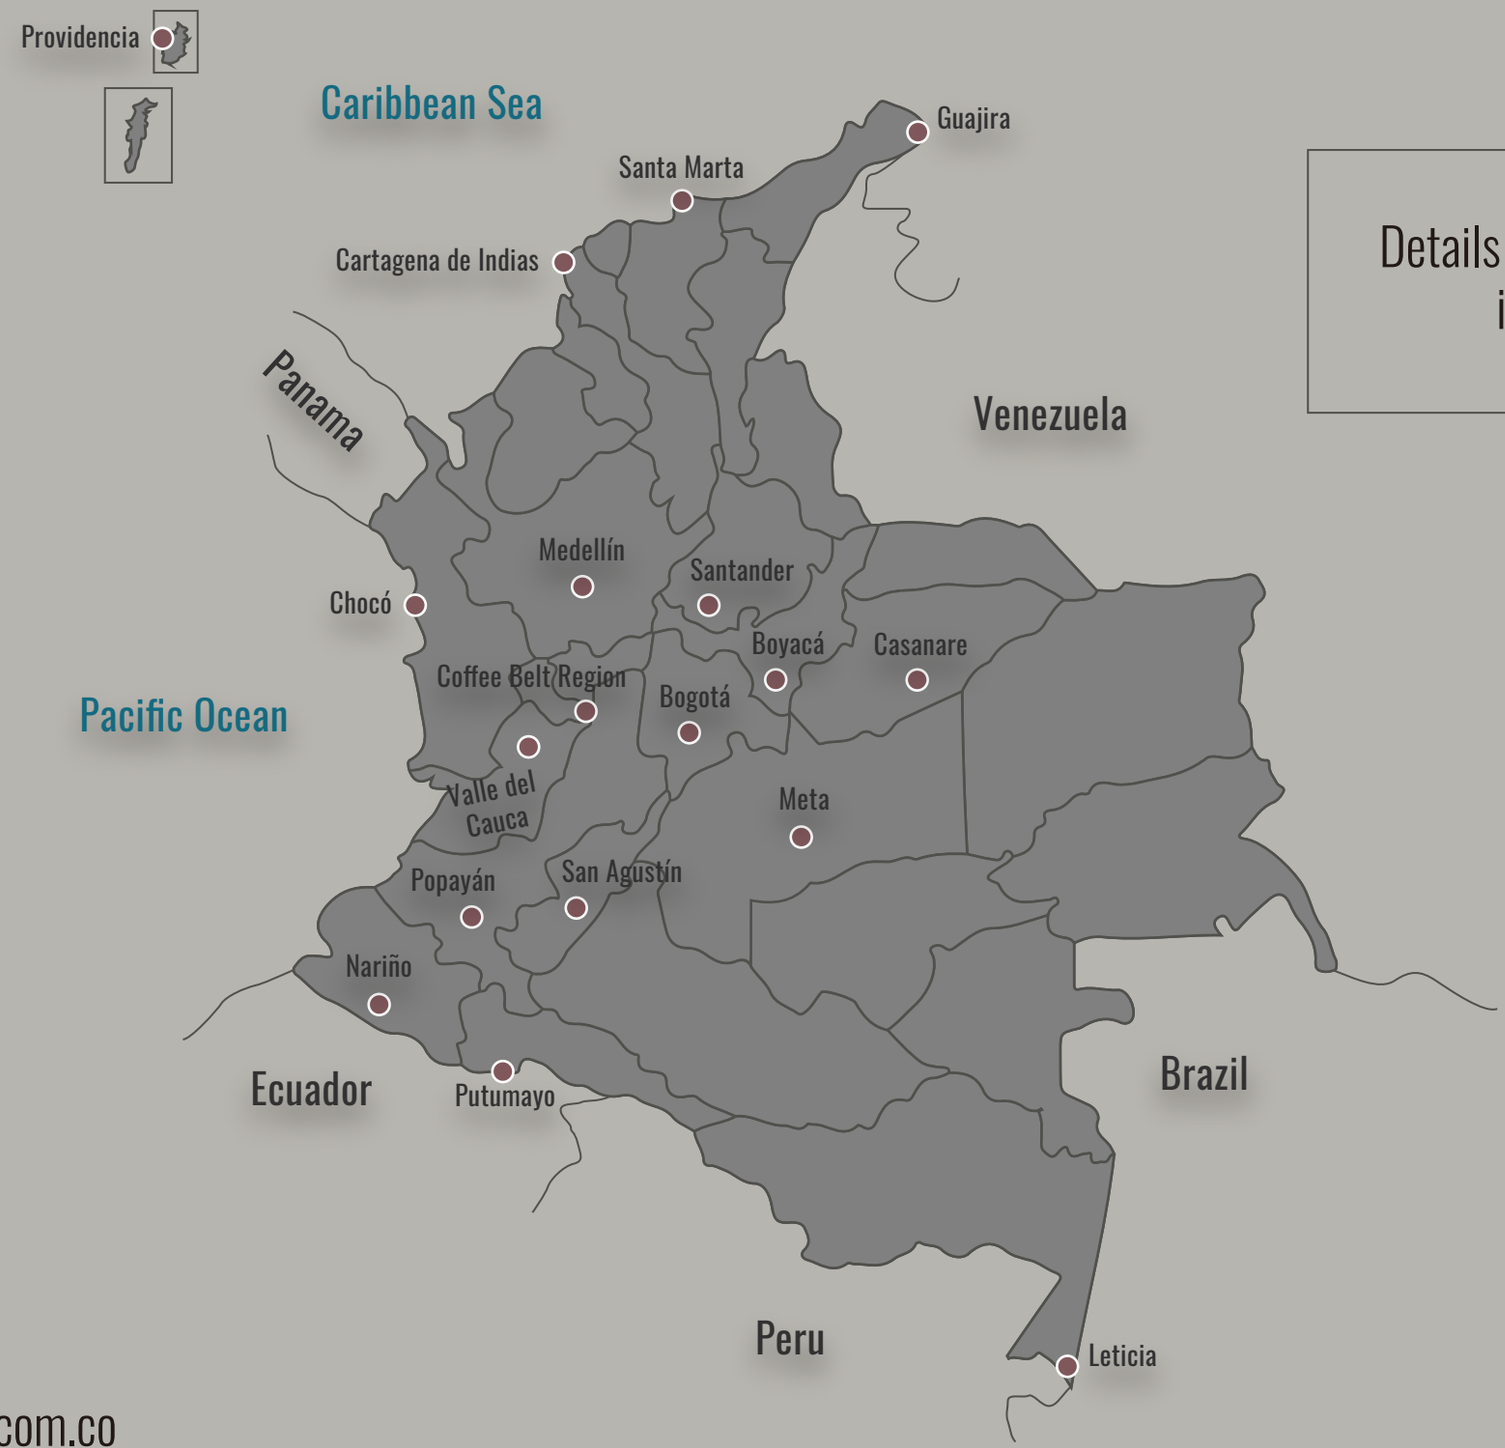

The travel agency PELECANUS is committed to pursuit sustainability in all our activities reducing the impact on the environment, expressed in a responsible use of the energy, water, paper and waste management. Our providers all around Colombia are also committed with the sustainability of their regions, creating a chain which aims to protect not just the flora and fauna of each destination but also the cultural heritage: physical artifacts and intangible attributes of our society.

As part of the vision of the company, we support the local development in the destinations that we offer and with which we work. We seek in each of the destinations local suppliers of domestic products to contribute to the growth and reactivation of local economies.

Pelecanus is against sexual exploitation of children and adolescents in accordance with law 679 of August 3, 2001, issued by the Congress of the Republic of Colombia, and by means of which "... a statute is issued to prevent and counteract exploitation, pornography and sex tourism with minors, under Article 44 of the Constitution".

All persons must denounce, prevent and prevent the exploitation, publication, use and dissemination of images, audiovisual archives, documents or links related to any type of pornographic material or sexual activities alluding to minors. These activities are punishable by Colombian law and represent a crime.

DESTINATIONS

Details of some of our destinations in the following pages

BOYACÁ

In the eastern Andes mountain range lays the department of Boyacá, one of the 32 departments of Colombia. It is known as a cool region whose main economic activities are agriculture and emerald mining. However, this region has much more to offer. There are also warm climates, valleys and plains with a great variety of landscapes. The unique gastronomy has been passed down to us by our indigenous ancestors of the highlands. In addition, there are many beautiful villages in Boyacá that represent the history of the country.

In Boyacá was the religious center of Muisca culture. Further it was a very important area during the Spanish conquest and the war of Independence. Battles took place in the Pantano de Vargas and the Boyacá Bridge. Some of Colombia's most beautiful cities, such as Monguí and Villa de Leyva, are also located in Boyacá. Specialties of the region are the local crafts, which produce ponchos, ceramics and fabrics.

In Boyacá, there are many gems (not just emeralds) to discover. From historic cities, craftsmanship, magical places, moors, mountains, lakes and friendly people who welcome tourists with open arms.

CARTAGENA

Declared a World Heritage Site since 1984 by UNESCO, the port, fortress and monumental complex of Cartagena de Indias enchants visitors who travel to Colombia with the colors of the facades of their more than 400-year-old houses', exalted by the sea breeze and the magical sunsets. Bathed by the waters of the Caribbean Sea and framed by a beautiful bay, Cartagena de Indias is a city full of history and Hispanic reminders, given mainly for its important role in the colonial era as a strategic port and navigation terminal for the Magdalena River, the most important river in Colombia. The role as a strategic port is reflected in the fortresses and walls that await the sunset to evoke the struggles of the past which is why it is called "walled city."

Cartagena is one of the most important destinations in Colombia, not only because of its tropical climate of 29°C in average, but also because of the charm of its colonial, republican and modern architecture, setting the attractions of an intense nightlife, lush landscapes, magnificent beaches, excellent gastronomic offer and an important hotel and tourist infrastructure.

We must highlight the romantic streets that inspired and served as home to our Nobel Prize winner in Literature, Gabriel García Márquez, creator of magical realism.

GUAJIRA

La Guajira is situated in the north of Colombia, in the northernmost point of the South American Continent. This peninsula is covered in much of its territory by deserts and memorable landscapes embedded in the waters of the imposing Caribbean Sea in the Colombian-Venezuelan territory. It is inhabited by the Wayúu, one of the most important indigenous communities in the country. This ethnic group moves around the territory without taking account of national borders. There, among songs, traditions and ancestral beliefs, this fascinating department extends its territory. Its temperature ranges from 22° to 40°C and one can find a wide variety of terrestrial ecosystems as the Guajiro desert or the humid mountain jungle.

On your Colombia tour, some of the main places to visit for those who want to immerse themselves in this important part of Colombia's wealth include the rural settlements where the Wayúu ethnic group lives, the salt mines in Manaure, the beaches in Cabo de La Vela and the dunes of Taroa in Punta Gallinas. Cradle of vallenato and mix of cultures, La Guajira served as an inspiration to our Nobel Prize winner in Literature, Gabriel García Márquez, for the creation of the magical realism.

POPAYÁN

Popayán is situated in the Valley of Pubenza between the Western and Central Cordillera at 1760 meters above sea level, a position that confers a climate that oscillates between 14º and 19º C. The city is one of the most important religious centers in the country. Thousands of national and international pilgrims arrive in the city in April every year to experience the holy week festivities recognized as a cultural and intangible heritage of the humanity by the UNESCO in 2009.

Besides being considered one of the most beautiful and best-preserved cities not only in Colombia but in Latin América, Popayán also has great historical and cultural wealth, a heritage from its important role during the Viceroyalty of Nueva Granada.

The gastronomic culture of Popayán was recognized by the UNESCO in 2005 for its distinction of Creative City of Gastronomy by its variety and meaning for the intangible patrimony of the country. Visitors can enjoy the typical delicacies of the region such as “empanadas de pipián”, carantanta, amasijos, among others.

Visiting Popayán while on a holiday in Colombia means experiencing pre-Hispanic traditions, natural richness, gastronomical patrimony and elegance as shown in the white fronts of its houses and churches.

COFFEE BELT REGION

The coffee belt region is composed of four departments: Caldas, Quindío, Risaralda and the north of the Valle del Cauca, interconnected for short distances and merged in its architecture, colours, values, traditions, customs and the characteristic and delicious scent of Colombian coffee. These four departments are in the centre of the Colombian western, and together they have built a cultural and landscape empire around the coffee bean, declared a World Heritage Site by UNESCO in 2011.

The climatic conditions of the coffee belt are very varied, temperatures fluctuate from 8°C in the Nevados and 29°C in the valleys. Within the geographical variety of the region are the ideal conditions for the cultivation and production of a high-quality coffee bean (between 1,200 and 1,800), whose biggest achievement is worldwide recognition through the brand “Juan Valdez”, which has managed to position Colombian coffee as the best in the world.

The courtesy and friendliness of its people complement the pleasure resulting from the immersion into the landscapes filled with coffee, banana plantations and dense mountains, whose colours and shapes give the impression of being assisted daily by skilled gardeners.

SANTA MARTA

Founded in 1525, it is the oldest city in South América. Santa Marta has a privileged location on the shores of Santa Marta bay in the Caribbean Sea, right in the foothills of the Sierra Nevada, whose thermic variations are between warm and dry and permanent snow. Home of the millenarian Tayrona indigenous culture that lived there, nowadays it's known as the Tayrona National Natural Park. The city is considered one of the most beautiful bays in Latin America for its jungle landscape full of mangroves, corals, beaches, virgin nature and reefs; a peaceful and spiritual place.

This city is not only the holder of a unique architectural heritage, breath-taking panoramas and a huge cultural and colonial legacy, but also of a wide and particularly wealthy in flora and fauna. With an average annual temperature of 27°C, this region is home to an infinite variety of savage animals, among them the flock of birds and the pack of howling monkeys who welcome the visitor with a constant bustle; a magic that's very hard to describe.

PROVIDENCIA

Providencia Island is situated in the Northwest of the Caribbean Sea, and although it is geographically closer to Nicaragua, it is part of the Colombian territory. The average temperature is between 25°C and 30°C. This earthly paradise with unspoiled beaches and white sand has an impressive seven colours sea, delicious exotic fruits and around 5,000 joyful inhabitants. With a dozen small hotels and a beautiful land far from the large tourist resorts, the island guarantees true rest and a place to link with nature on your Colombia holiday.

Surrounded by marine wealth and the third longest coral reef in the world, it offers its visitors the best diving and snorkel experiences in its crystal-clear waters, as well as fascinating adventure stories of pirates that are part of the cultural heritage. In 2000, UNESCO proclaimed the island as a World Biosphere Reserve “SeaFlower” due to its immense natural wealth.

Providencia is a natural treasure of Colombia and a living example of the ancient Caribbean.

BOGOTÁ

Guarded by Monserrate and Guadalupe sanctuaries, the capital of Colombia is the political, economic, administrative, industrial, cultural and tourist epicentre of the country. Located in the middle of Colombia at 2630 meters above sea level, it's the world's third highest capital, a condition that gives it a cool mountain climate that ranges between 6°C and 18°C. The capital has the Sumapaz Paramo among its priceless treasures, the largest in the world and the most important water source in the country. The city's diversity can be explained by its history; it was erected on the struggle of its first settlers Muiscas and the Spanish conquerors, whose most characteristic footprint resulted in this confrontation which is the coexistence of pre-Colombian traditions with European-influenced architecture.

Bogotá represents multiculturalism and the harmonious existence of colonial history and contemporary bet. Because Bogotá is a focal point of people from all regions of the country, it's a great mixture of the best of Colombia, turning it into an open-door city which offers excellent gastronomic, cultural, economic, ecological and artistic, a place of infinite possibilities.

MEDELLÍN

Medellin has been consolidated since the last decade of the twentieth century as the second Colombian city, by having the largest number of inhabitants after Bogotá. Medellin has a fortunate geographic location in the widest part of the natural region known as the Valley of Aburrá, located in the central mountain range of the Colombian Andes. The area is rich in water sources such as the Medellin River, which runs through the Valley from South to North, a condition that gives the city pleasant temperatures ranging between 14°C and 26°C.

This spring climate of the Eastern Antioquia protects the different floral crops that give the region the privilege of being the world's second producer and exporter of flowers, which is the reason why Medellin is known as the "city of the eternal spring", "mountain's capital" and "silver cup"; polite expressions with which its inhabitants have tried to extol its virtues.

When you travel to Colombia, Medellin is nested in the middle of Colombia as an innovative and attractive city, not only for its commercial and industrial activity, but also for its eventful cultural and night life. Medellín is an economic and fashion capital, as well as an open-door city with

SAN AGUSTÍN

The largest set of funerary complexes and statues carved in stone are in this town. San Agustín hides in its archaeological park one of the greatest mysteries of pre-Colombian civilizations, a main attraction for tourists and for the scientific community. Located in the centre of the Andes mountain range, in the Colombian massif at 1,730 meters above sea level, it has preserved for hundreds of years the memory of a pre-Colombian culture that carved its cult of life and death into stone, a mystery that allowed it to be a World Heritage site by UNESCO in 1995. With a pleasant climate of 20°C, visitors can practice archaeological and ecological tourism, cycling and horseback riding. This welcoming destination has fascinated travellers and scientists, attracted by its landscapes, archaeology and culture.

LETICIA

The Colombian Amazon is part of a much larger region shared with Venezuela, Brazil, Peru, Ecuador, Suriname, Guyana and Bolivia and is also considered the lungs of the world. With more than seven million square kilometers, it is a giant carbon dioxide storage and oxygen producer. As an autonomous country, the Amazon region would be the ninth largest in the world. According to the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), the wealth of flora and fauna includes 158 amphibians, 674 birds, 212 mammals, 195 reptiles, 753 fish and more than 6300 plant species.

The Colombian department of Amazonas is the southernmost region of Colombia. It consists almost exclusively of large tropical forests. The climate is warm and humid, with an average temperature of 25 degrees Celsius and rainfall all year round. Due to the partly strong and long-lasting rain and the associated flooding, road construction is not possible. Traffic routes are therefore mainly via air and water. The capital of the department is Leticia and is surrounded by rainforest and the Amazon river. It is a border triangle with direct border with Peru and Brazil. Leticia stretches over the border, but is called Tabatinga on the Brazilian side. You can cross the border on foot.

The diversity in the whole area is huge and is not limited to the animals and plants in the area. The local communities are also very different. Most of them like to receive visitors to share their typical dishes, fruits, traditions, customs, dances and unique scenery. A few of the indigenous cultures that can be contacted in the Colombian Amazon are the Uitoto, Ticuna and Bora. However, there are still tribes that have no contact with the western world.
