Estonia is one of the greenest countries in Europe – fifty per cent of its area is covered with forests. And yes, it’s true – you get 4G coverage even in the middle of the woods.

Estonia is one of the least religious countries in the world with only 16% of the population saying religion has any importance in their lives. At the same time, 69% believe that trees have a soul.

The Estonians invented Kiiking, which is considered a sport. It involves fastening yourself to an enormous standing steal swing (kiik means swing in Estonian) which has a full 360 degrees of rotation to it. To swing a kiiker the contestant must pump by squatting and standing up on the swing. The swing gains momentum taking the person in full circle by his skillful pumping.

e-Estonia

While other countries are still thinking about it, Estonia embraced online voting already in 2005. In here, 95% of tax returns are completed online and businesses can be registered in minutes. You can sign legally binding documents using your ID card or mobile ID, and now, even those living outside of Estonia can benefit from the e-residency scheme, a program to allow non-Estonians and non-EU citizens to gain access into the Estonian e-society, giving them access to the EU single market by allowing them to establish a company in Estonia.

Bike tours

Be active and discover Tallinn in a green way!
Pedal your way toward Pirita for a stop at the Song Festival Grounds where Estonians "sang themselves independent" in the late 1980s. Now pedal to the Estonian History museum, where you will visit the outdoor exhibition of Soviet monuments. Sculptures of Lenin and other Soviet leaders remind the difficult times under Soviet occupation. Follow the coastline towards the Memorial to the victims of communism. Before coming to your lunch restaurant NOA or turning back to the city centre, make a stop at the beautiful Pirita beach and glance at the former Olympic Center, constructed for the Moscow Summer Olympics in 1980.

Fatbikes have wider tires which helps you to discover places where one can´t go with regular MTB. It is possible to ride longer distance with less effort and see much more.
Fatbike rides are interesting on diversified landscape as for example Türisalu cliff, a 30 meters high limestone plateau, offering a good view to the sea and to Vääna beach. Along the border of the sky and the sea it is pleasant to conquer the terrain with fatbikes.

Bog hiking

About 20 % of Estonia is covered by swamps and bogs. The development of a swamp finds its final form in a bog. It is an autonomous ecosystem with its typical vegetation.

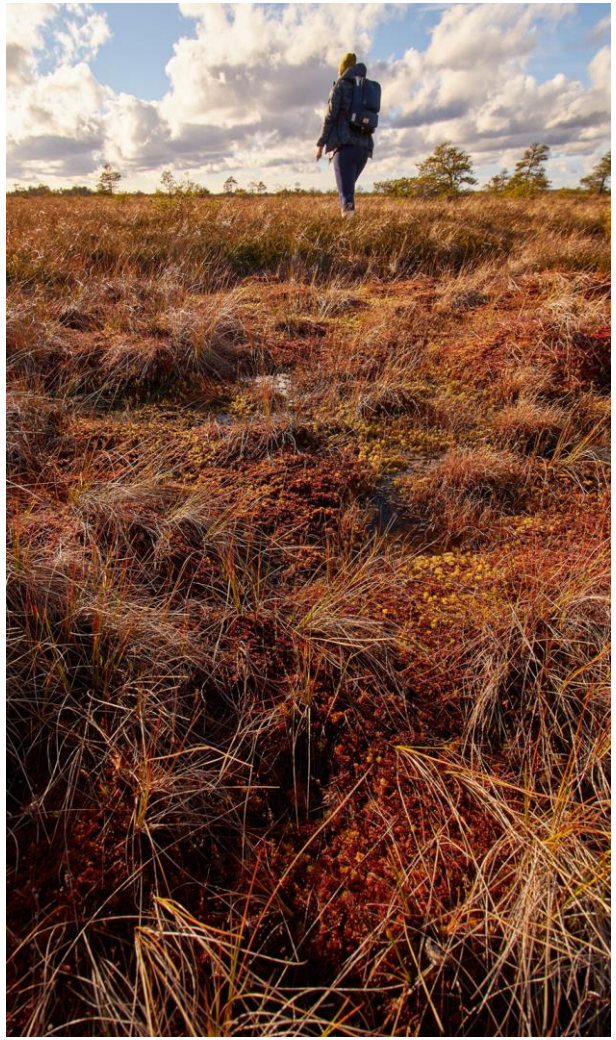

Bog-shoeing is a traditional way to move around in deep snow or on these mires. Generation back, Estonians used bog shoes when picking berries and making hay here. This helpful footwear prevents you from sinking through the sphagnum moss. Thanks to the bog shoes you can discover places which people cannot reach by foot. It’s a whole new experience.

During the bog-shoeing trip you’ll hear many interesting facts about Estonian mire nature.
A local guide accompanies you and shows you most typical bog plants, such as the Cotton-grass, Bog Arum (wild calla), Cowberry, Heather, Cranberry and many others, the Sundew – a tiny bog plant that can digest insect flesh – among them.

Kayaking, canoeing, SUP etc.

Take a look on Tallinn from a different angle! Kayaking is suitable for beginners as well as for experienced kayakers.
3-4 hours kayaking tour in Tallinn will offer a waterbird's-eye view of Estonia's capital and its "medieval modern" skyline, plus a slice of history, from its days as a major trading port in the Russian Empire to its prominence in the Danish era, and its more recent Soviet occupation.
As paddling past 8 ports, with a collection of military vessels, you'll get a glimpse of Peter the Great's marine castle and Patarei – the seldom visited but infamous NKVD prison. A welcome next stop will be Paljassaare Peninsula, with a walk on sandy Pikakari beach, Tallinn's closest bird watching area. From there, then paddling back to the city – enjoying the sweep of graceful architecture – towers, spires, and the onion dome of the Russian Orthodox cathedral – that still punctuates the rapidly changing skyline.

There are plenty of rivers and lakes to discover by canoe in Estonia, and each of them has a different face and is interesting in its own way.
