Hassan II Mosque
10:00 to 11:00
1 hour

The largest in the country, Hassan II Mosque is a momentous dedication to the Islamic religion. Its 60-storey-high minaret is topped with a laser, which points to Mecca, the birthplace of the prophet Muhammed - it is the tallest minaret in the world.

Looking out to the ocean, the mosque is partially built on the seabed, creating a picturesque place of worship that over 100,000 people can come to pray in.

The mosque is a sublime piece of Moroccan architecture that defines the grandeur of the style. It is estimated that 6,000 artists spent 5 years creating the traditional Moroccan designs that make up the mosque. The artists used marbles, granites, wood, plaster mould to make the great mosaic of all; the complex that is the Hassan II Mosque.

Marrakesh
10:00 to 17:00
7 hours

A city like no other, Marrakesh exceeds all expectations. From ancient architecture and markets to charming restaurants and ornate artworks, the city is a treasure trove of secrets waiting to be discovered.

Take a walk through the Medina to discover the gardens, religious sites and mosaics that the city is famous for.

Wondering around the streets you can sample some local delicacies from street vendors and try your hand at haggling for trinkets. In the evening, you can head to Jamaa el-Fna for some entertainment that is only found in Marrakesh.

Koutoubia Mosque
10:45 to 11:45
1 hour

The largest mosque in Marrakesh, Koutoubia Mosque is also known by several other names, such as Jami' al-Kutubiyah, Kutubiya Mosque, Kutubiyyin Mosque, and Mosque of the Booksellers.

Found in the southwest medina quarter of Marrakesh, the mosque is ornamented with curved windows, a band of ceramic inlay, pointed merlons, and decorative arches; it has a large plaza with gardens and is floodlit at night, casting a dramatic light over the mosque.

The most notable, and essential feature for all mosques, is the minaret, where you will hear the sound of the call to prayer echoing throughout the city 5 times per day. The design is particularly magnificent, its facade is undoubtedly one of the most photographed motifs of the city.

Bahia Palace
12:00 to 13:00
1 hour

Surrounded by gardens, the Bahia Palace was built in the late 19th century. Intended to be the greatest palace of its time, its name translates to 'brillance palace' in English.

As with other buildings of the period in Morocco, it was intended to capture the essence of the Islamic and Moroccan style. Today, it stands as one of the most beautiful and extensive structures in Morocco.

The palace expands over eight hectares of land and is one of the largest and most luxurious palaces of its time. Standing as a fine example of Morrocan architecture, it is one of the major monuments of the Morroco's cultural heritage and top tourist spot.

Tombs of Saadian
13:00 to 14:00
1 hour

Located next to the mosque of the Kasbah, the Saadian tombs are one of the only remains of the Saadian dynasty that reigned over the Golden Age of Marrakesh between 1524 to 1659.

In the early 18th century, Sultan Moulay Ismail decided to remove all traces of the magnificence of this dynasty by demanding the destruction of all remaining vestiges. He dared not, however, commit the sacrilege of destroying their burials and ordered that the entrance to the necropolis be completed.

The Royal necropolis was used from the beginning of the 14th century, however its splendour came at a later date. In 1557, the burial of Prince Mohamed Sheikh took place. His son Ahmed El Mansour, also known as Ahmed “the Walleye”, had the mausoleum enlarged and embellished the site with the koubba “Lalla Mesouada” from his mother’s name. Lalla Messaouda was buried there in 1591 as well as the 3 successors of the sultan.

Menara Gardens
14:15 to 15:15
1 hour

Looking out onto peaceful waters, with the dramatic backdrop of the Atlas Mountains, the Menara Gardens are surrounded by orchards and groves. The centre of the gardens is marked by a pavilion to which lends its name, Menara, translating to 'lighthouse', suggesting the lookout point from which it creates.

The gardens were created during the 12th-century Berber movement, however, the pavilion was not created until the 16th century, when it was built to be used as a summer residence for the Sultan of the Saadi dynasty.

The artificial lake which compliments its dramatic setting greatly is man-made, with hopes of creating an irrigation system using a complex network of channels, the lake is maintained using a hydraulic system that connects to the Atlas Mountains, an impressive 30 kilometres away.

Jemaa el-Fna
15:30 to 16:30
1 hour

There is nowhere in Morocco like the Jemaa el Fna Square – a surprise on every corner, you'll want to keep coming back for more.

By day, most of the souk is a large open space, where a handful of snake charmers bewitched their cobras with flutes, traditional pharmacists in the north-east of the square display cures and elixirs, and dentists, with fearsome claws, release the pain from sufferers. Not a pleasant sight, but a spectacle, nonetheless!

As dusk approaches the scene begins to change, people come out for a walk and the place fills up little-by-little - it becomes a carnival all of the storytellers, acrobats, musicians and artists.

Wandering down row-upon-row of performers and you will soon be immersed in the ritual: crouching in the midst of spectator circles, giving a dirham or two as thanks for their performance, you'll find hours pass by so quickly.

If you want a break, you can walk to the rooftop terraces, such as the Grand Balcon Café, for a view of the square and a birdseye view of the action.

Chez Ali Marrakesh
20:00 to 22:00
2 hours

You will be welcomed by the Berber tribes who will accompany you to your table under a caidal tent. For more than four hours, let yourself go to the rhythm of the Berber parades, musicians, acrobats and oriental dancers.

Chez Ali Restaurant is the place of 1001 nights with Moroccan hospitality. They offer guests a sumptuous dinner and a memorable show in Berber tents. It is an enchanting wonderland of belly dancers, fireworks, and folk music all with special surprises.

Bewitched by the songs and dances of folk groups, you'll eat, listen and see something truly exceptional.

Azrou
13:00 to 14:00
1 hour

Perched at an altitude of 1,250 metres and surrounded by mountains covered in evergreen holm oak and cedar trees, Azrou is an important centre of trading for the regions Berber tribes. It sits at a major junction of mountain routes in the middle of a huge cedar forest which is great to see whilst here.

Within the cedar forest, you'll be able to come close to the oldest inhabitants of this region, the Berber apes, and you may hope to pop some of the unique butterflies that also live here. You may also meet the nomad people that live here; they are very friendly and will often invite you in for a traditional Moroccan mint tea in their tents.

Azrou attracts many locals and tourists alike for activities such as hiking, picnicking and macaque spotting. The region is also known for its cherry trees, apple trees and fish farms.

University of Al-Qarawiyyin
11:00 to 12:00
1 hour

The University, also one of the most highly revered places of worship in the country, is the oldest existing continually operating university in the world. The institution has been recognised by both UNESCO and Guinness World Records.

The grand building was founded by Fatima al-Fihri in 859 with another associated school. The building soon became one of the most notable spiritual and educational centres of the Islamic Golden Age, the first in the Islamic world.

The university focuses its studies and historical texts on Islamic religious and scientific laws, alongside traditional Arabic linguistics and the study of ancient Sunni law.

The architecture of the building has had many additions since it's first construction over 1000 years ago, its original size was around 30 metres long, maintaining a rather simplistic design comparative to other Moroccan structures. However, the minaret was the first of its kind, forming the design and structure that is echoed throughout northern Africa.

Al-Qarawiyyin is the central point of focus for religious activity in Fes; it has been established through tradition that the mosques of Fes must hear the call to prayer from Al-Qarawiyyin before sounding their own call to prayer.

Bou Inania Madrasa
12:30 to 13:30
1 hour

Bou Inania is widely regarded as one of the finest examples of Marinid architecture.

With the advice from the leaders of Al-Qarawiyyin, Abou Inan, the last Sultan of the Marinid dynasty built the madrasa, it was the last building to be erected during the ruling of this dynasty, named after the sultan.

Upon completion, the madrasa was used as an educational centre and a congregational mosque; this is the reason that this madrasa became the only one to have a minaret, from which worshippers are called to prayer. The madrasa was, and still is, highly regarded as a Great Mosque. In spite of its reverence, it's one of the few religious sites that non-Islamic visitors can enter.

Found opposite the Bou Inania Madrasa is the Dar al-Magana, a hydraulic clock that was built in conjunction with the madrasa.

Chouara Tannery
14:00 to 15:00
1 hour

One of three in the city of Fes, Chouara Tannery is the largest and was built in the 11th century. Located in Fes el Bali, the oldest medina quarter of the city, Chouara Tannery continues to run as it did in the early centuries, but today it is considered one of the main tourist attractions in the city.

The tanneries are filled with round stone vessels which are filled with dye or white liquids for softening the hides. The leather products produced in Chouara Tannery are exported around the world.

With processes that have changed very little since medieval times, one of the first things you will notice about the Chouara Tannery is the pungent smell which offers a unique insight into the natural process which results in world-class leather.

Jewish Mellah of Meknes
11:00 to 12:00
1 hour

The Mellah Qdim, once the old Jewish quarter, the new Mellah has a modest synagogue frequented by a small community via Berrima.

Mellahs were first built in the city of Fez during the 15th century and soon spread across Morocco, originally intended to be a place of safety and protection for the Jewish people.

You sense the change in building styles once through the arch that separates the Mellah from the Medina.

Address: Rue el ferran berrima, Meknès, Maroc

Hassan Tower
13:00 to 14:00
1 hour

Situated in the capital city of Rabat, Hassan tower is the minaret of an incomplete mosque. Construction began in 1195 and was intended to the the world's largest minaret along with the mosque, also as the world's largest. However, the death of Sultan Abu Yusuf Yaqub al-Mansur in 1199 halted the construction at 44 metres, 42 metres short of what it was intended to be.

The mosque was also left incomplete with only the beginnings of several walls and 348 columns constructed. The Hassan Tower along with the incomplete mosque and the modern Mausoleum of Mohammed V form an important historical and tourist complex in Rabat.

guided

Address: Boulevard Mohamed Lyazidi, Rabat, Morocco

Mausoleum of Mohammed V
14:00 to 15:00
1 hour

Facing the Hassan Tower, standing tall on the Yacoub al-Mansour esplanade, is the mausoleum of late Mohammed V. Completed in 1971, it contains the tombs of the Moroccan King and his two sons, late King Hassan II and Prince Abdallah.

The building is considered a masterpiece of modern Alaouite dynasty architecture, with its white silhouette, detailed features and topped by a traditional green tiled roof; green being the symbolic colour of Islam as within the holy scripture the Quran, it is associated with Paradise.

guided

Address: Rabat, Morocco

Kasbah of the Oudayas
15:00 to 16:00
1 hour

Along the Bou Regreg River, the Kasbah of the Oudayas was built in the 12th century, during the reign of the Almohad Caliphate.

When the Almohads had seized Rabat and destroyed the Kasbah of the Almoravid Dynasty in the town, they began to reconstruct it between AH 544 and AD 1150. With the addition of a palace and a mosque, it was renamed it al-Mahdiyya, after their ancestor al-Mahdi Ibn Tumart. The Kasbah is now largely abandoned.

You will have the opportunity to visit the old-fashioned Moorish gardens, stop in a traditional coffee house for mint tea, and in between, explore the Oudaya museum of tribal arts and crafts where you will be introduced to traditional Berber textiles.

guided

Address: Rabat, Morocco

Dar al-Makhzen - Royal Palace of Rabat
16:00 to 17:00
1 hour

The official residence of the King of Morocco, the Royal Palace is more commonly known as Dar al-Makhzen. Its official name is El Mechouar Essaid Palace, directly translating to Happiness Palace.

Built to replace Mohammed V's palace in 1864, the palace became the official home when Morocco successfully became independent. It is used for assemblies and ceremonies and has been the site of many significant events for the Moroccan monarchy.

The palace contains several schools; one for seniors of the royal family, a cookery school and a library.
