The park's name is derived from the Tarangire River, which winds through its landscape. During the dry season (June to November), Tarangire is particularly remarkable as wildlife congregates around the river, creating a spectacle rivalling that of the Serengeti. Often referred to as the 8th Natural Wonder of the World, Ngorongoro Crater is the largest intact volcanic caldera on the planet. Formed about 2 million years ago when the Ngorongoro volcano erupted and its walls collapsed, the crater's floor sank to create a unique natural enclosure with towering 600-meter walls. Spanning over 19 kilometres in width, the crater is a diverse ecosystem, featuring acacia forests, hippo-filled swamps, and expansive grasslands. It hosts an impressive array of wildlife, including over 30,000 animals such as elephants, warthogs, flamingos, and the rare black rhinoceros, as well as various predatory cats.
